Bodily Autonomy

Michelle Buenrostro · Maria Ault · Robert N. Rust

WATCH CLIP 11 — Open the corresponding MP4 video

Michelle Buenrostro

Yeah, most pro-choicers are pretty moderate, and they're not bodily autonomy absolutists. And you can tell because most pro-choicers actually support some form of gestational limits. They become uncomfortable with abortion sometime in the middle of pregnancy, whether because of fetal development, because the fetus feels pain, or because the viability threshold has been crossed.

Michelle Buenrostro

And I think that this discomfort is why there's so much denial about later abortions and the fact that they do happen. People say that they don't happen, or they're just a live birth, or they only happen under extreme medical emergencies, that they're not elective, that they're extremely rare. And this just lets us know that people are uncomfortable with later abortions.

Source: Descript’s 13-clip transcript document. Speaker attributions are editorial matches to the original interview transcript; “Multiple speakers” identifies text combining different voices. This PDF does not contain independently verified clip-relative timestamps. Interview statements reflect the speakers’ views and are not independently fact-checked.